It is proposed to erect by subscription, in the Congressional Cemetery, a monument to the gallant and faithful Holland, who died firing the signal gun on board the ill-fated Arctic.

MASSACHUSETTS KNOW-NOTHING STATE CONVENTION.

BOSTON, Wednesday, Oct. 18, 1854.

The Know-Nothing State Convention assembled in this city to-day. Over 2,000 Delegates were present, completely filling the lower hall of the Tremont Temple. As none but Delegates were admitted, little reliable information of their doings can be obtained. It is said the Convention was quite stormy, and the claims of the several candidates proposed for Governor were discussed. There is reason to believe that the following ticket was finally agreed upon: For Governor, Henry J. Gardner of Boston; for Lieutenant-Governor, Simeon Brown of Concord. Mr. Gardner is a member of the firm of Denny, Rice & Gardner, dry goods dealers in Milk-st., and was two years President of the Common Council under Mayor Seaver. He is a young man, and has hitherto acted energetically with the Whig party. Mr. Brown is editor of an agricultural journal, a good citizen, with no strong party predilections.

OHIO STATE FAIR.

NEWARK, Ohio, Wednesday, Oct. 18, 1854.

The State Fair is now in full blast, and the admissions have been very large. About 6,000 badges have been sold to-day, and some new entries made.

The Committees have been engaged since 10 A. M., and their examinations will not be completed till late to-morrow.

The reports of premiums will not be made public until Friday.

The horses of Ohio are much finer than is usually supposed at the East. The stallions of various breeds are as handsome as can be found in Vermont. Sixteen roasters are now trotting in the ring, which is one-third of a mile in circumference, to the great delight of some 50,000 people. This part of the exhibition attracts the crowd from the examination of the cream of the Durham stock of Ohio.

Chichester's flex machine is being set up in Mechanics' Hall, and a large quantity of straw is on hand for to-morrow, when the practical value of the improvement will be shown.

The manufacturers' department, and the display of flowers are small for a State Fair. Each, however, possesses objects of attraction.

A carriage on exhibition, manufactured at this place is superior in point of elegance to anything which has been seen at the Crystal Palace.

Owing to the postponement of the fair from September, the products have come forward slowly. There is, nevertheless, much good fruit, and some most excellent sweet potatoes, grown in Ohio, which have been kept fresh for one year.

The attendance at the fair cannot be estimated, unless by numbers. The weather is glorious, and the exhibition is going off to the satisfaction of all, except those who have been inconvenienced by the detention of freight.

NEW-ENGLAND HORSE EXHIBITION.

BRATTLEBORO, Wednesday, Oct. 18, 1854.

The New-England Horse Exhibition to-day was a fine one; the entries included about 150 animals, four-fifths of which were Morgan varieties—Black Horses predominating. There have been exhibitions with a greater number of horses, but none perhaps of greater value of stock. $5,000 were refused for each of two horses on the ground.

This morning a half mile was made by a mare belonging to Mr. J. L. Briggs of Springfield, Mass., at the rate of 2:44. A mare belonging to Mr. Twitchell, the Superintendent of the Boston and Worcester Railroad, also made excellent speed.

This afternoon was devoted to testing the qualities of stallions, and those designed for all work, and those of seven years and under by the rule of speed; but none of them beat the above time.

The attendance on the ground was liberal.

The programs of to-morrow includes sundry trotting matches and the decisions of the Judges.

Friday will be spent in miscellaneous matches, some of great interest; also a trial of equestrian skill for the prize of a gold watch, to be competed for by ladies. A similar prize is offered for the best speech made by three year old horses.

Correspondence of The N. Y. Tribune.

NEW ALBANY, Wednesday, Oct. 18, 1854.

Yesterday was a glorious day for the people. There never was so warmly a contested election in this county before. It was ascertained that a large delegation of Irish were to be imported from Louisville to vote; they came according to promise and commenced offering their votes early in the day—but the people were awake. The average Anti-Nebraska majority in Floyd County is about 215. The Hon. A. P. Willard resides here, and has been triumphing the State, and this county in particular, in favor of the Whigs. Goods from the East are finding their way West by that point, per the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. An immense amount of deer and tobacco is shipped from that point, as well as cattle and horses and hogs. The same gentleman informs us that the corn crop was a failure in that section the past season—that not more than three-fourths of the usual yield was realized.

DOUGLAS AT HIS OLD HOME.

Correspondence of The N. Y. Tribune.

QUINCY, III., Monday, Oct. 9, 1854.

On Saturday last we were favored with the presence and speech of the "Little Giant." His coming had been heralded through the country, and his friends had been very industrious. Large posters with large capitals, both in German and English, had been pasted up on every corner, and at every turn of the road through the country, commanding the "faithful" to be on hand on that day. Urgent appeals were sent to his sympathizers in Missouri, to attend and do honor to the peculiar champion of their "peculiar institution."

A programme of bands of music, military companies, fire company, &c., &c., was published and circulated.

A band of music was sent thirty miles into the interior to wake up the sleepy suckers, and draw them by the magic of music to the Douglas gathering; and every device that ingenuity but drooping "Locofocoism" could invent, was put into operation to gather an immense crowd to greet their "much loved and much missed" Douglas.

Here was the home of Douglas before he married and where he began his successful career in the field of politics. This is the district that once sent him, by large majorities, to the Senate of the United States.
